Dear Friends,

The week following graduation I had the opportunity to take a few days of vacation. This time away provided a wonderful opportunity for me to look back over the 2008-09 academic year. What a year! My reflections, while free flowing and rambling, often returned to our students, especially those who had just graduated. They are men and women who became a part of the Thomas More community. Together we learned, encouraged, served and challenged one another. They will be greatly missed! However, we take pride in their accomplishments, and we are so hopeful for what their future holds.

As you read through this issue of Moreover, you will see why my thoughts so often focused on our students. They are a gifted group of individuals who are attending Thomas More College for varied reasons. Some come straight from high school, others are returning to college to complete a degree, and still others are pursuing a second career. No matter their age or motivation, Thomas More students have excelled academically, athletically and in their service to the community. Our students have presented at national and regional conferences, received fellowships for graduate studies, earned Presidents’ Athletic Conference championships, competed in NCAA tournaments and participated in local, national and international service projects. They truly are ready to take their place in our world as disciplined thinkers and ethical leaders.

While we have had much success this academic year, like everyone else we have not been immune to the repercussions of the economic climate. Yet, we can never allow our mission to suffer a recession. So, amidst these uncertainties, we have remained committed “to develop and sustain challenging… programs of study… within the Catholic intellectual tradition,” programs that are accessible and affordable to anyone who wishes to attend Thomas More College. This would not be possible without the generous support of alumni, friends and the local community. This year alumni giving has increased significantly, a gift from a local charitable foundation allowed us to provide additional student scholarships, and with a lead gift from the Diocese of Covington, we committed to the building of a free-standing chapel on campus. These gifts take on special meaning because they are given by those who face economic uncertainties of their own.

And so my vacation reflections were infused with a spirit of gratitude. We spend so much time hoping a situation will be better that we often fail to recognize all the good around us. Psalm 63 says: “My soul is filled as with a banquet; my soul is full of joy.” I hope as you read this issue of Moreover, you will join us in thankful celebration for the “many banquets” of the academic year 2008-09.

Wishing you a blessed summer,

Thomas More Chapel Fund

UPDATE

Since March, Thomas More College has received gifts to the Chapel Fund from three additional parishes: St. Catherine of Siena, St. Mary of the Assumption and Mother of God. Numerous individual cash gifts and gifts in-kind from Division 4, Inc., LaFarge North America, Inc. and Robert Ehmer Hayes and Associates have been donated. In addition, a pledge for the stained glass window behind the altar was received from the Al Schleper family in memory of Shirley Schleper.
Recently named one of three librarians in the nation by the Library of Congress to serve on a committee regarding a traveling exhibit, there is no doubt that Dave Schroeder is at the top of his game.

He possessed the qualifications The Library of Congress sought in a public librarian including skills in history and archive/museum work, which made him the perfect candidate to assist in the design of its traveling exhibit.

Dave has worked at the Kenton County Public Library for more than 18 years, most of which he spent working in the Kentucky History and Genealogy Department. From 1996-2000, he pulled double-duty as a full-time archivist for both Thomas More College and the Diocese of Covington. Dave was named Executive Director of the Kenton County Public Library system in 2007.

This recent announcement is just one of Dave’s many successes. The Kenton County Public Library’s annual increase in circulation statistics and program attendance prove just how many people continue to use the library. He observes libraries as “one of the great equalizers in our society. Public libraries are one of the few places in our community that bring people of all walks of life together in one facility.”

Dave is excited about his role with this new traveling exhibit. “I will be a member of the advisory panel. It will be our responsibility to determine a theme for the exhibit, provide advice on how the exhibit will be crafted and what primary resources from the Library of Congress will be used to illustrate the theme,” says Dave. In addition, this advisory committee will also discuss ways to create a dynamic online version of the exhibit.

This $1 million traveling exhibit is sponsored by the Abby and Emily Rapoport Foundation, which has sponsored other Library of Congress exhibits such as American Treasures and World Treasures. Of course, it is Dave’s hope that the exhibit will appear locally, but he explains, “Once the exhibit has been constructed then public libraries, college and university libraries and museums will have an opportunity to apply for grants to have the exhibit displayed in their facilities.” Items to appear in the exhibit are yet to be determined, as well as his length of service on the committee.

Community involvement has been a significant aspect of Dave’s life. He is a member of the American Library Association, the Kentucky Library Association and the Collections Committee at the Behringer-Crawford Museum in Covington, Kentucky. He is also on the Board of Friends at the Kentucky Public Archives and the Baker-Flunt Foundation, also located in Covington, Kentucky. A few years ago, Kentucky Governor Ernie Fletcher appointed Mr. Schroeder a member of the Kentucky Archives and Records Commission. In October 2009, he will become Vice-Chair of the Kentucky Public Library Association.

Even as a young elementary student at Sts. Boniface and James in Ludlow, Kentucky, Dave knew he wanted to do something with his life related to history. It was one of those career placement tests that happened to indicate he would be well-suited to be a librarian — not what he considered an appealing career choice at the time. However, a few years later while a student at Covington Catholic High School, he worked as a shelve in the Covington Library. This experience confirmed what the placement test indicated — he was well-suited to be a librarian. Mr. Schroeder loves working in libraries and studying history. He has been lucky enough to do both.

Ringing It Up in 2009

This year, twenty-seven Thomas More College student volunteers rang up alumni during the month of February. “We were so pleased to have our students contacting alumni who responded to their calls in an overwhelmingly positive manner,” said Sr. Margaret Stallmeyer, President. The students raised $33,356 to support scholarship programs at TMC. This was a 48% increase in giving over last year’s Phonathon.

Many of the alumni who made gifts were at one time scholarship recipients themselves. The amount raised during Phonathon 2009 proves that people are at their best when they are reaching outside of themselves to help those most in need.

Our students learn some valuable life lessons in being Phonathon callers. How many jobs are there where current students get to meet so many different people all sharing the common experience of having attended the same college? Also, it looks great on their resumes.

Alumni Salute

Even in the midst of a turbulent economic climate, Thomas More College alumni proved they can be counted on when things get tough. During this year’s annual fund campaign, which ran from June 1, 2008, through May 31, 2009, the Thomas More College alumni giving percentage reached 20.3%. According to a 2008 study conducted by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), this increase places Thomas More in the 65th percentile nationwide among private liberal arts colleges. In addition, over the past 2 years the number of new alumni donors has increased by 110%.

Unrestricted gifts from alumni provide opportunities to increase student scholarships, enhance academic programs, invest in faculty and staff and enhance the quality of life on campus. We salute Thomas More College alumni for helping to make a Thomas More education available to future alumni.

Volunteers Count

Thank you to the over 200 volunteers who assist Thomas More College in a variety of capacities throughout the year. Without your dedication of time and resources we would not be able to accomplish such tremendous goals.

Thank you for another wonderful year!

“After starting my family and entering into my career as a young banker, I realized that it was imperative for me to complete my undergraduate degree in order to achieve my career goals. As an adult student, I attended evening and weekend classes on a part-time basis to pursue my degree. Thomas More College’s RECALL program, the predecessor to TAP, provided me the opportunity to earn 60 credit hours, which resulted in earning my degree in five years less time. Thomas More met my needs as an adult student and as a result, I feel committed to ‘give back’ through my time and resources. I have served on the Foundation as a volunteer for over 10 years and my husband and I ‘give back’ through annual contributions. Since my employer matches my contribution, the college receives a bonus. Thomas More gave me the foundation to continue my education to complete my MBA. I encourage all alumni to ‘give back’ and donate through your time, talent, and resources to continue the success of Thomas More College.”

Lou DeFalaise has had quite an exciting career in both law and public service, extending in geographic area from Kentucky to Washington, D.C. He began this service as Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, a position he held for 18 months. He then returned to private practice with the law firm then known as Adams, Brooking and Stepner in Covington, Kentucky (now Adams, Stepner, Woltermann & Dusing PLLC). In 1975, Lou was chosen to represent the 63rd House District in the Kentucky General Assembly. In those days, the district encompassed the suburban areas of Kenton County from Covington to Erlanger and Elsmere.

After six years, he was sworn in as United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, covering the eastern half of the Commonwealth centered in Lexington. “President Ronald Reagan offered me the opportunity to serve in this capacity for the Eastern District of Kentucky, and I was happy to accept,” offers Lou.

Setting public policy priorities was one of the most interesting aspects of his job. He was able to help form a statewide task force to address environmental crime by working with other federal and state authorities. The United States Attorney functions as the chief federal prosecutor and civil litigator in one of ninety-four Judicial Districts representing almost all federal agencies. “My office was involved in everything from coal mine safety enforcement to federal debt collection. At the time, typical criminal cases included firearms and explosives violations, bank robberies, kidnappings, environmental crimes and many types of financial fraud,” says Lou. Overall, the most satisfying part was the feeling Lou experienced doing something positive for the community while protecting the rights of citizens.

In 1991, Lou went to Washington, D.C. to become Counsel to the Director of the Executive Office for United States Attorneys. This job was challenging because many issues arose from all over the country and required immediate answers. “One day it might range from the handling of protestors blocking air field runways to paying for forensic autopsies,” remembers Lou.

He became Director of the Office of Recruiting and Management in 2003, a position that he holds today. He oversees matters relating to the hiring, policy, management and separation of some 10,000 career attorneys who work for the Department of Justice. Lou’s office promotes career legal recruitment efforts for the entire Department and the United States Attorney’s offices; administers the Attorney General’s Honors Program for hiring graduate law students; and is also responsible for the adjudication of FBI whistleblower cases.

For Lou, the best part about living and working in Washington D.C. and the surrounding area is the diversity. From cuisine and cultural events to museums, monuments and national leadership functions, there is an abundance of activities in which to participate, see or hear. He and his wife, Sharon, reside in Virginia which Lou describes with “nearby horse farms that happily remind me of Kentucky.” There are also several vineyards, along with many Revolutionary and Civil War period sites which make it particularly interesting for anyone who loves history.

Upon reflection of how his college experience and how his career took him from Kentucky to Virginia and Washington D.C., Lou incorporates some geographical history. “As much as I miss Kentucky, I always remember that Kentucky and Virginia began as one state and share a rich institutional and cultural heritage, including sharing the title of Commonwealth with only two other states.”
On May 16, 2009, three hundred and twenty three Thomas More graduates received their degrees in front of family and friends at the eighty-first commencement exercise. Baccalaureate Mass took place at the Cathedral Basilica of the Assumption in Covington, Kentucky, prior to commencement.

The Reverend Al Hirt delivered the commencement address. Fr. Hirt currently serves as the Pastor of St. Monica-St. George Church Newman Center in Cincinnati. He has held the position since 1999.

Special recognition included: Mr. Joseph W. Gross, President and Chief Executive Officer, St. Elizabeth Health System, who received an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Romes and Mrs. Millie Faust who received the St. Thomas More Medallion.

Others receiving special recognition are: Full-time Faculty of the Year Award — Dr. Siobhan Barone, Professor of Biology; Part-time Faculty of the Year Award — Stephen Thomas, Senior Consultant in the English Department. Dawna Neil received the Presidential Service Award.

Eighteen students graduated from the first cohort of the Master of Arts in Teaching program. The program offers concentrations in both Middle Grades and Secondary content areas. Of the eighteen who are graduating, thirteen have positions teaching in the Greater Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky Area, and five are completing their student teaching this spring.

Thomas More College

Class of 1959

Commencement Speaker, The Reverend Al Hirt, O.F.M.
We were five students and none of us knew exactly what we were getting ourselves into. We were participating in a sociology course in which you learn about the U.S.-Mexico border in the classroom and then experience it first-hand in the field.

In preparation for the trip, we learned Mexican geography, culture, history and discussed stereotypes and “myths” of Mexican-Americans. However, I don’t think anything could have prepared us for the real life situation we were about to experience. “What is an Annunciation House?” “What will we be doing exactly?” These were questions that we asked leading up to our departure, but they were not answered until we arrived in El Paso, Texas. Only by experience did we fully understand the answers to these questions. We were given the opportunity to experience several sides of the southern border and learn of immigration laws. Living it meant so much more and sunk in deeper than words ever would.

Annunciation House and Casa Videz are just two of four houses that help illegal immigrants living in Texas. On our first night in El Paso, we were standing outside of Annunciation House watching kids playing with a ball and having a blast! The joy on their faces masked the fact that these kids called this shelter their home.

The same happened when we arrived at Casa Videz and got acquainted with the illegal immigrants living there. Mothers and their children were so cheerful and welcoming toward us. Everything they had was either donated or paid for by donations, which brought me back to my home and how much I take for granted. The illegal immigrants living here rely solely on the generosity of others to survive, not just for themselves but for their children.

Traveling through Palomas, Mexico, we observed first-hand the sheer poverty. Stray dogs cluttered the streets and teenagers sold knock-off CDs and held doors open to get tips. We were also able to tour a maquila (factory) in Juarez, Mexico, and were surprised that the working conditions were more favorable than what we had seen in documentaries. The workers received some health benefits and daycare for children up to age four, but they were still only paid five dollars per day. The other side of immigration along the southern border was seen... through the lens of the Border Patrol, who protects our country by making sure that those who enter the U.S. do so legally. Overwhelming statistics were presented about how many illegal immigrants entered the United States from the southern border and how many die trying to do so.

Thomas More student Terence Toone had a unique way of looking at the trip. “This trip really opened up my eyes to the international discrimination problem that is going on in America. As a black man brought up in the inner city streets of Columbus, Ohio, I always limited discrimination and injustice to the Columbus city limit. Border Studies showed me that discrimination is not just a local problem but rather a more global issue…an issue which is exploited along the southern border.”

Perhaps the most intriguing question Border Studies raised was whether the ability to protect our country was in direct conflict with our responsibility to care for people who do not possess the resources to live. It’s true, the United States has specified legal ports of entry and specific procedures that must be adhered to in order to become a legal citizen. However, when a family is starving — what option is there but to leave? Where is the invisible line that we, as people, must draw for ourselves to determine when we close off in fear and rejection or when we offer what we can, regardless of skin tone or location on a map? Sadly, as of today, this line has solidified into over 700 miles of double-layered fencing on the southwestern border of our country.

Border Studies

The program is part of a Sociology course (SOC 381) that entails an intensive exploration of the U.S. - Mexican border region both in and out of the classroom. The purpose of the course is to engage students in multicultural affairs to heighten their awareness, understanding and appreciation of the social issues, their fellow human beings and the diversity of the world.

Border Studies Stats

The Border Studies Program began in 1999. Over 100 Students and Faculty have participated since 1999.

Phi Alpha Theta

The end of March, twenty-three students participated in a field trip, which the chapter and the College’s Honors Program co-sponsored, to visit New Salem Village, Abraham Lincoln’s house, and the Lincoln Presidential Museum in the Springfield, Illinois, area. As part of the Lincoln Bicentennial commemoration the chapter had earlier sponsored a public presentation by Dr. James Ramage, national Phi Alpha Theta president and Professor of History at Northern Kentucky University on “Lincoln as a Public Speaker” on February 22.

On April 4, 2009, Julie Bauerle, a senior member of Phi Alpha Theta, a history honors society, presented “Women Who Have Broken the Mold: Julia Dinsmore and Isabela Selmes Ferguson Greenway King” at the organization’s Regional Conference at Eastern Kentucky University. Dr. John Cimprich, Thomas More’s chapter advisor and member of the national advisory board, represented the national office at the event.

Education Department Showcases Work of Parochial Schools

The Education Department display case recently featured work from two local parochial schools. Sister Mary Norene McCormick, a 1973 Thomas More graduate, and her first and second graders at Prince of Peace School, Covington, contributed a three-dimensional penguin display. Katie Smith, a 2008 graduate of Thomas More, and her eighth grade class at St. Therese School in Southgate provided foil sculptures. Fifth graders at St. Therese also displayed diorama book reports. These were followed by fourth graders’ historical characters represented as “tube people.” The most recent works from St. Therese were animal facts and faces from the second grade and colorful masks from the seventh grade. The masks were student responses to the poem “We Wear the Mask,” which they studied in class. Such displays promote school pride on the part of the contributors and enhance the relationship between Thomas More’s Education Department faculty and parochial school students.
Heim to Be First TMC Washington Center Intern

Thomas More student Maria Heim will be the first representative of the College to participate in The Washington Center Internship Program. Maria, a double-major in History and Political Science and president of the Pre-Legal Studies Club, is scheduled to be in Washington, D.C. for her internship this summer. Maria will be working in the Office of the Internal Revenue Services (IRS). While there, she will take a course entitled “Introduction to Criminal Law and Criminal Procedures” taught by the attorney of the IRS. Her preference is to work in the U.S. Attorney General’s Office because she plans to attend law school at the College of William & Mary in Virginia after graduation. Thomas More became affiliated with The Washington Center last year and is pleased to be able to provide internship opportunities for students in the nation's capital. The internship program is offered to students with any major and includes internship opportunities in government, business, and non-governmental organizations.

Maria Heim will be interning in Washington, D.C. this summer.

Biology Student Presents at Conference
Senior biology major Jeff Goessling was invited to speak at the second annual Northern Kentucky Reptile Conference at Lloyd High School on Saturday, April 18, 2009. Jeff spoke on the chytrid fungus epidemic in frogs which is ravaging populations of species worldwide. His presentation was entitled: “Global Warming, the Silent Spring Revisited.”

Political Science Students Present at Conference
Sophomores Mark Messingschlager and Robert Spoor recently delivered papers at the annual conference of the Kentucky Political Science Association at the University of Louisville. The conference allows political scientists and students the opportunity to share their research and discuss current political issues. Both students developed their papers in a “Campaigns and Elections” class taught by Dr. John T. Spence last fall. Messingschlager’s paper, “Collapse and Resurgence: John McCain’s 2008 Republican Presidential Primary Campaign,” examined factors influencing the elasticity of public opinion in a presidential primary, while Spoor’s paper was a re-evaluation of classical electoral theory, “Toward a New Understanding of Critical Elections.” This was the first time students in Thomas More’s Political Science program have presented conference papers.

Phi Delta Kappa Student Teacher Scholarship Award
Each year the Northern Kentucky Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa awards a monetary scholarship to outstanding students who will be student teaching the following fall or spring. This year the award was presented to Brittany Goetz, an elementary education major at Thomas More College. Criteria for the award includes proven leadership abilities in the classroom, as well as in related activities, such as clubs and volunteer opportunities. It also includes being active in community service, evidence of potential teaching dispositions in her/his respective teaching level, and being in good academic standing. The award recipient must be supported and recommended by three professional references. Brittany was presented the award at the April 21, 2009, event.
Dr. Mary Ann Barnes knew she wanted to become a doctor early in life and it was her surroundings that had an impact on her calling. “As a teenager, I was struck by the inequities and lack of healthcare in the hollows of rural West Virginia. I was not allowed to visit a young girl who lived on our farm because she had scarlet fever, but the family was too poor to take her to a doctor. It was then that I struck a deal with God that if He helped me through the training, I would do what I could to help those around me.”

The second child of two Villa Madonna College alumni, the late Edward Barnes ’51 and the late Carolyn (Mader) Barnes ’52, Mary Ann also graduated from Thomas More College in 1977 and completed her residency at St. Elizabeth Healthcare (then St. Elizabeth Medical Center) after graduating from University of Louisville Medical School. She joined the faculty of the residency program at St. Elizabeth Family Practice Center in 1989. What energizes her most about teaching the residents? “I get to change the way medicine is practiced. Working with patients, you change one life at a time. Working with students and residents, you get to change the next generation,” explains Dr. Barnes. The relationships she forms with her patients is what motivates her the most. “If not for loving the people I call my patients and co-workers, it would be a job. Because of the great people I call my patients and co-workers, going into the office is invigorating.”

In addition to family medicine, Dr. Barnes has been blessed with being able to address some public health and social justice issues in her practice, such as women’s health, nutrition, and obesity research. She has also received additional training as a medical acupuncturist in Chinese Herbal Medicine. Acupuncture is an Eastern medical treatment based on “Qi” (or “chi”), the life-force or vitality that nourishes the body and what is balanced in acupuncture. Mary Ann attests, “There is an ever-increasing wealth of research showing the benefits of acupuncture in many medical conditions. I still cannot totally understand how it works from a Western medicine perspective. It operates out of a totally different paradigm of health and disease. Fortunately, as more research is being done, more employers are providing it as a benefit for their employees.”

How Dr. Barnes knows just how and when to incorporate acupuncture as an additional or alternative therapy for some patients lies in whether their conditions have responded to traditional treatments. She explains, “I suggest they try other modalities if patients don’t respond to traditional treatments. The medical group from St. Elizabeth is augmented with the village nurses of Belize and the Red Cross.

Dr. Barnes performs acupuncture on some of the patients in Belize. She does remind us that “medicine will continue to change dramatically over the next few decades, fortunately. Research will tell us what works in all the different paradigms of health and disease. Treatments are becoming much less invasive and the best will be offered from all the different paradigms of health. Perhaps we’ll have a better understanding of how Western medicine affects “Qi” and how acupuncture works from a Western medicine perspective.”

It seems as though Dr. Mary Ann Barnes is definitely living up to her part of the deal she struck with God as a teenager. She is indeed helping those around her, no matter where she is.

Dr. Barnes encourages anyone who would like to get involved to join them. “Others are always welcome to join us on these trips. Our work in the villages requires about 2–4 helpers for every doctor on the trip. No prior experience is necessary. We can train the helpers to do the jobs that are needed.” Anyone interested should e-mail Dr. Barnes at mbarnes@stelizabeth.com for details about the next February trip.

TOMS Shoes: Shoes for a Better Tomorrow

Alyssa Lowry, a double major in English and Sociology, completed an internship this spring with TOMS Shoes. TOMS Shoes is an organization devoted to giving shoes to underprivileged children across the world. While traveling in Argentina, founder Blake Mycoskie was presented with a daunting reality: the impoverished children were suffering from debilitating diseases, such as podoconiosis, due to contaminants in the soil. This disease is 100% preventable simply by wearing shoes. Shoe drives are an annual occurrence in Argentina and Blake wanted to do more. He created TOMS Shoes and made a commitment to give away a pair of “TOMS” to a child in need for every pair of shoes sold.

Alyssa first heard about TOMS Shoes through her church and was inspired to apply for the internship program. “I wanted to make a difference and share TOMS Shoes’ mission with my community with a goal to get shoes on people’s feet,” Alyssa explains. She carried out three events on campus this semester, each inspiring the Thomas More community to get involved and make a difference. Later, she hopes to participate in a shoe drop with TOMS Shoes and work closely with the underprivileged children.

I left the U.S. terrified of traveling with a group of strangers around London, England. As soon as I stepped off the plane and into the morning light, I knew I was in for an adventure.

Almost every day I visited two museums including the British, Victoria & Albert, and the Tate. I saw London at night from over one hundred feet in the air from the London Eye. I reverently gazed at the ornately decorated tombs of great rulers, writers, and artists of the past in Westminster Abbey. The Tower of London sent chills down my spine as I entered the towers where prisoners had been kept. I stared in awe at the crown jewels.

Watching my step, I walked along the mossy, stone path surrounding the Roman bath as I gazed at the steam swirling upward from the greenish, murky water below. In Cambridge, I took a picture of an apple tree descended from the one that Newton sat under when he discovered gravity. I witnessed the sun rise on the steps of the National Gallery overlooking Trafalgar Square with Big Ben in the background covered in a foggy haze.

I made new friends and explored the city on foot. I learned things about art, history, another culture and myself that I would never have known had I not traveled abroad. It was a great experience I shall never forget.

TOMS Shoes

In 2006 an American traveler, Blake Mycoskie, befriended children in Argentina and found they had no shoes to protect their feet. Wanting to help, he created a company that would match every pair of shoes sold with a pair given to a child in need. One for One. Blake returned to Argentina with a group of family, friends and staff later that year with 10,000 pairs of shoes made possible by caring TOMS customers.

Since its beginning, TOMS has given over 140,000 pairs of shoes to children in need through the One for One model. TOMS plans to give over 300,000 pairs of shoes to children in need around the world in 2009.

Ongoing community events and Shoe Drop Tours allow TOMS supporters and enthusiasts to be part of our One for One movement. For more information, visit www.tomsshoes.com.

This spring, Dr. Sanders, along with Andrew Walker, a senior criminal justice major, partnered with the Erlanger Police Department in conducting a community satisfaction questionnaire. More than 400 citizens who had contact with the police department were surveyed about their encounter. Faculty Profile

Ten Minutes with Larry Boehm

How long have you worked at TMC?
A: I came to TMC after a brief stint with the federal government. I’ve been here for 20 years.

What are your hobbies?
A: Reading, woodworking, fishing, and camping are at the top of my list. I also cook a mean homemade salsa.

What are you passionate about?
A: Positive psychology — this relatively new area asks questions such as what makes for a meaningful or satisfying life? What brings happiness? What are the consequences of pursuing money and status to the exclusion of other things? What can you do to improve your own well-being? Researchers have examined the relationship between life satisfaction and personality, values, material wealth, religion, and other traits or circumstances to address the question of what constitutes a meaningful life. The findings are clearly relevant to the choices we face and the mixed messages we encounter.

What do you see as your biggest challenge as an educator?
A: Taking experimental psychology, which can be dry and technical, and making it interesting and relevant.

Where is the last place you traveled and why?
A: My daughter and I spent two weeks in Britain last summer. We share a nerdy interest in the libraries and museums of London and some of the historic sites in England and Wales. The trip allowed us to have some quality time together before she left for college.

What is your favorite book?
A: This is a tough call because there are so many choices. In psychology, How to Think Straight about Psychology by Stanovich and The Social Animal by Aronson are two of my favorites. Other favorites include The Shadow of the Wind, Don Quixote, and the Harry Potter series.

What is in your CD/MP3 player right now?
A: A collection of Led Zeppelin songs from iTunes.

If you had to put your story in just a few sentences, what would it be?
A: Working class kid goes to college, finds his niche after some uncertainty, meets his future wife (at a fraternity party), realizes that being a professor would be a cool job, goes to graduate school, ends up at a liberal arts college that seems to be a good fit, raises a couple of kids, and wonders how it will all turn out.

What is something you’ve always wanted to do, but haven’t had the chance to do yet?
A: I’ve visited 40 of the 50 U.S. states and would like to visit the remainder, especially Alaska and Hawaii.

What is something about you that people would be surprised to know?
A: I almost became a lawyer. If the college is ever struck by a giant meteor, and I’m not killed by the impact, then law school is plan B.

What is your motto? Or words to live by?
A: “The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook.” American philosopher and psychologist William James.

Are You a Thomas More Legacy Family?

Legacy families include those whose relatives graduated from Villa Madonna College/Thomas More College and/or are current students attending Thomas More College. Family members considered part of a legacy family include grandparents, parents, aunts, uncles, daughters, sons, sisters, brothers and cousins.

Legacy families carry on the tradition, spirit, and values of their alma mater since many of them may have been introduced to the College at a young age, carrying that loyalty with them as they grew older.

Children and grandchildren of alumni can bring a sense of tradition and a link to part of the College’s history. Legacy families provide for the transfer of loyalty for generations to come. One of the hopes of Thomas More College is that alumni might share their cherished experience with family members encouraging their own relatives to attend.

The TMC Alumni Association honors family loyalty and would like to maintain this information for generations to follow.

Please provide the following information for as many persons in your family who are part of your Thomas More legacy. Include each person’s graduate name, graduation year, attendance years (if not an alumni) and the relationship of this person to you.
The 2008-09 basketball season was a banner year for both the Thomas More College men and women's basketball teams. Both teams won the Presidents’ Athletic Conference (PAC) regular season and tournament titles and advanced to the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III Basketball National Tournaments.

The men’s team posted a 19-9 overall record and a 10-2 PAC mark to claim several firsts for the program: its first-ever PAC regular season and tournament titles and its first-ever appearance in the NCAA Division III National Tournaments. Highlighting the Saints’ season was a thrilling 65-62 home win over Washington & Jefferson College on February 11 to clinch the PAC regular season title, and then their 91-65 win over Bethany College in the PAC Championship game at the Connor Convocation Center on February 28. The NCAA Division III Basketball Committee sent the Saints to Columbus, Ohio, where they played No. 13 Capital on its home court. Capital was undefeated on its home court, but that didn’t bother the Saints as they took the Crusaders to overtime before falling 80-77.

The women’s basketball team compiled a 28-3 overall record, a 13-1 mark in the PAC, and a No. 8 ranking in the final poll of the internet Web site, d3hoops.com Top-25. This past season the Saints had their fourth straight 20-plus win season, won their fourth straight PAC regular season title, won their third straight PAC tournament, and made their third straight appearance in the NCAA Division III National Tournament where they advanced to the tournament’s “Sweet 16.”

The Saints opened the NCAA Tournament on the road as they defeated Randolph-Macon College, 76-61, in the first round in Granthum, Pennsylvania, and then defeated host and No. 15-ranked Messiah College, 57-50, in the second round to advance to the “Sweet 16.” Thomas More was then awarded to host a Sectional and welcomed No. 2-ranked Hope College, No. 3-ranked George Fox University and No. 5-ranked Oglethorpe University to Crestview Hills. In the Sectional Semifinals the Saints fell, 67-51, to Hope in front of a capacity crowd of 1,200 in the Connor Convocation Center.

Hetzer Appointed to the NCAA DIII Baseball Committee

Thomas More College Head Baseball Coach Jeff Hetzer has been appointed to the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III Baseball Committee. Hetzer will be the new Mideast Regional Representative. His term of service on the committee will begin September 1, 2009, and continue through September 1, 2013. The committee is responsible for evaluating teams throughout the season and for the selection and administration of the 54-team NCAA Division III Baseball National Championship. Hetzer, who just completed his ninth season as the skipper of the Saints and the program’s all-time winning coach with a 215-127-3 career record, is also the assistant athletic director at Thomas More.
In April, Thomas More College Athletic Director Terry Connor announced the appointment of Jeff Rogers as the new head men's basketball coach.

Rogers is the eighth head men's basketball coach in school history and is only moving up one chair on the Saints' bench as he had served as an assistant coach at Thomas More for the past two seasons.

“We are extremely excited to have Jeff Rogers take over our men's basketball program,” commented Connor. “He has a tireless work ethic and is a great teacher of the game of basketball. We are very confident that he will help maintain our position among the conference and region's best academically and athletically.”

“I appreciate the opportunity that is being provided to me by President Sister Margaret Stallmeyer and Athletic Director Terry Connor,” stated Rogers. “I'm excited to have the opportunity to continue building a successful program at Thomas More. I want the team to be the best team academically in the Presidents' Athletic Conference.”

A native of Louisville, Kentucky, Rogers earned his Bachelor's Degree from Western Kentucky University in 1989 and a Master's Degree from the University of Louisville in 1996. He began his coaching career in 1989 when he served as an intern with USA Basketball at the United States Olympic Committee Complex in Colorado Springs, Colorado, for a year. Then he served as an intern with the University of Kentucky Basketball program in Lexington, Kentucky, from 1990 to 1992. After leaving Kentucky, Rogers served as the Director of Basketball Operations at the University of Missouri/Kansas City in Kansas City, Missouri, from 1992 to 1996.

In 1996 Coach Rogers returned to Kentucky and served as a high school head boys coach for 10 years before joining former head coach John Ellenwood's staff in 2007. Over the 10-year span of his high school coaching career, Rogers' teams won over 70% of their games, compiling a 201-84 record (.705), winning four straight district championships and winning a regional championship twice.

He and his wife, Stacy, reside in Hebron, Kentucky, with their three daughters, Emma, Aubrey and Allyson.

Men's Tennis Receives PAC Sportsmanship Award

The Thomas More College men's tennis team was named the 2009 Presidents' Athletic Conference (PAC) Men's Tennis Team Sportsmanship Award winner by the PAC office. This is a new award and is sponsored by the members of the PAC Student-Athlete-Advisory Council (SAAC), in an effort to recognize and encourage positive sportsmanship among the conference teams. The SAAC is a committee comprised of student-athletes from each member institution assembled to provide insight on the student-athlete experience.

Softball Continues Saints’ Dominance of the PAC

The softball team continued Thomas More College's dominance of the Presidents' Athletic Conference (PAC) as it won the school's fifth PAC regular season title and third PAC tournament title during the 2008-09 academic year. The softball team joins football, women's soccer, and men and women's basketball teams, which all added to the PAC Regular Season banner that hangs on the east wall of the Connor Convocation Center. The Saints advanced to the NCAA Division III Championship Tournament and went 2-2 at the Greencastle, Indiana, Regional as they won their first-ever NCAA tournament game and finished regional semifinalists.

First-year head coach Lindsay Bramhall and the softball team became the fourth Thomas More team to advance to the NCAA Division III National Tournament this season in their sport as the football and men and women's basketball teams all made the NCAA Tournament in their sport during the 2008-09 academic year. Thomas More was one of only two schools that qualified for the NCAA Tournament in those four sports at the Division III level. The University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, a school of 8,000 plus, was the only other school in Division III that accomplished that feat.
