Step Into the Future

THOMAS MORE COLLEGE

TOGETHER IN PURSUIT OF TRUTH

Dear Friends,

As Thomas More College's newly inaugurated president, I greet you with sincere gratitude for the opportunity to serve this great institution. Those of you whom I've had the pleasure to meet may recall my mentioning how many days I've been on the job. Since my first day on July 1, 2013, I have been keeping track. Why? Because I am excited to implement positive changes that will benefit TMC for the future. Having worked in higher education for 25 years, I am well aware of the challenges facing us. I have been sharing my vision all over town, and I hope that our alumni will join me in this step forward, building upon the excellent foundation put in place by Sr. Margaret Stallmeyer. Sr. Margaret's steady hand steered the College into an excellent position for taking on the challenges facing higher education in general and our small, liberal arts institution specifically.

I have so much enthusiasm for the new initiatives at Thomas More College. At the root of all of them is the passion to bring in more students so that TMC can continue to thrive in the coming years. Through the continued commitment and support of our alumni and our community, we can make this happen. Those who give back to TMC are investing in its future. Included in this issue is a list of our 2012-13 investors; to all, thank you!

As you turn the page, you'll see pictures from the Homecoming game. What a rainy day it was, but we had a great time tailgating, watching the Saints win big and enjoying the live music with our alumni in the Saints Zone (alumni tent).

My time here so far has been incredibly exciting. I have been impressed by our students and our alumni on countless occasions. On page 12, you'll read a story about Andrew Hebbeler and the tremendous impact he is making on our world. This is what we do at TMC: offer a distinctive and transformative experience so that our graduates can go out and transform the world.

On page 24, you'll read about the legacy of alumna Sister Mary Laurence Budde, 40-year faculty member and champion of the Biology Field Station. She was a true example of service and sacrifice, two traits I deeply value. We are richly blessed by Sister Mary Laurence's influence on the lives of so many students. As I mentioned in my inauguration speech (available now at thomasmore.edu/inauguration), we are fortunate that so many people connected to Thomas More College exemplify these qualities.

Some of you may be aware that my office is now located in the Saints Center. I invite you to come by and introduce yourself. I'd love to hear your stories and your ideas about how our College can continue to remain relevant and prosper in the 21st century.

Go Saints!

Dave A. Armstrong, J.D.

WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE TMC/VMC MEMORY?

Homecoming Attendees Share Their Favorites

The '80s Rocked!

"Larry Renaud swimming across the pond during Spring Fling, Party at the Pond in 1984. Also, he lost his contacts. And Super Dance, a 25-hour dance marathon to raise money for MDA - Larry swallowed a goldfish and I brought a runt puppy that I was raising by bottle... the Haunted House, I was a werewolf... Toga Parties - always fun, etc."

Jamie Schroeder '87

Homecoming is always a fun-filled event drawing young and old alike to enjoy the game, reminisce about Homecomings past or dance in the alumni tent (now the Saints Zone).

TAP Class of '07

"After being away from school for 25 years, I enrolled in TAP. My daughter called me in the parking lot on my way to my first class. She asked, 'Dad, are you nervous?' I said 'Oh yeah! This is kind of scary.' On the first day I met new friends, the teachers and staff were great, and I felt at home. Because of the program and my classmates I graduated with my Associates and then my Bachelor's Degree in 2007. I tried to rush a fraternity but no luck... KIDDING! But a great experience..."

More '80s Memories!

"Working the TMC Haunted House, Melanie Smeltzer-Lennon, Jenny Gronefeld-Gable and I were witches and were featured on the evening news. The toga parties were also great fun as were the sock hops."

Go Saints!

"We won four straight years in the PAC for football. This would be the best memory - being the most winning team to come through Thomas More College is an honor!"

Aaron Walter '12

TMC Family

"Having class with all my friends, it was always a great atmosphere and I felt comfortable around everyone. It was great walking through the hallways and knowing almost everyone. Made me feel a part of a big family."

Study Abroad in Ireland

Seniors Kelsey Hinken, Kaylan Hart and Ben Millman experienced two weeks of Irish bliss as they studied abroad.

SUBMITTED BY KELSEY HINKEN AND KAYLAN HART

According to the itinerary, 3 p.m. was the rendezvous time at the Cincinnati Airport for the Ireland Study Abroad group in order to have our bags checked and be ready to fly to JFK Airport a couple hours later. Just like in all good stories, however, nothing ever goes perfectly, and as we all nervously waited to get our bags checked, we heard the announcement that the flight would be delayed by a few hours due to storms over the east coast. Immediately, Dr. Ray Hebert, history professor and director of our Ireland trip, swooped in to work out the details.

We smiled at one another, knowing that the situation would presently find itself resolved if Dr. Hebert was on the case. Sure enough, after twenty minutes of finagling and phone calls, he had our entire group rerouted on a red-eye to Paris and then subsequently to Dublin.

There were no complaints from the group seeing as we got the longer leg of the trip over with from the start, skipped out on the chaos of JFK, and even got to stop in Paris before spending the next two weeks exploring the Emerald Isle. Thank goodness, the flight over the Atlantic and the hop from Paris to Dublin went off without a hitch, and finally, a few time zones later, we had arrived! By this time, we had met up with the rest of the group, two faculty members and fourteen students in all, representing the United States from Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and Texas; we were a diverse group brought together by this common interest in Irish history and culture. By the end of the trip, we left as one.

Two weeks may seem like the perfect amount of time, or so we thought when we first signed up for our summer Ireland trip. It's less extensive than a full semester abroad but more than just a week; however, given the chance again, we would have stayed in Ireland for the remainder of the summer. The Emerald Isle won our hearts; it was our home away from home. The Irish green rolling hills were strikingly similar to Kentucky's own bluegrass, so much so that at times during our travels, we forgot where we were. God must have been smiling on the Americans in Ireland as well during our stay because for the duration of our trip; it did not rain once and was consistently sunny and warm. If anyone is familiar with Ireland at all, they know that in a single day, all four seasons can be experienced. We happened to be there during one of the driest spells the United Kingdom and Ireland had experienced since the 1990s, and the meteorologists were considering it a heat wave. We've never heard of so many Irish suffering from sunburn before!

It is impossible to truly encompass the experiences of the trip in a brief review, other than to say it expanded our world-view as well as led to some self-discovery. The trip began in Dublin, the eclectic capital of Ireland, where Guinness is king and hurling team loyalty runs deep. A tour of the city would be incomplete without a visit to Trinity College and the Book of Kells, so that was our first introduction to the country. Since our class focus was the history of Irish nationalism, over the course of the next week we explored the essence of the city from the standpoint of Irish patriotism. We toured the National Government Post Office, known as the GPO, and the site of the 1916 Easter Rebellion in which the Irish Rebels declared Ireland a Republic from the British government; both Kilmainham and Wicklow Goals, where numerous political prisoners were held for fighting against their suppressors; Collins Barracks, where the Irish military history is proudly displayed, and Glasnevin Cemetery, where the beloved Irish heroes are laid to rest under beautifully constructed and disparate headstones. After a whirlwind experience in vibrant Dublin, becoming fluent in accents and bus stops, we took our leave of this fair city and headed south and west. During our second week, we experienced the natural beauty of the landscape and rustic nature of the Irish people. We first made our way through Waterford with its renowned and impeccable crystal, then, heading west, we stopped in the city of Cobh with its beautiful cathedral, memorials

VOTER REGISTRATION

Voter registration was held on campus on Sept. 18. Although it's not a presidential election year, several TMC students registered to vote. Students volunteering included (front, from left) Courtney Neltner, Paul Kleier, Christine Huck and Christian Mock. They were assisted by representatives from Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, a non-partisan advocacy group, (back) Joe Gallenstein and TMC alumnus Rick Traud '70. Also assisting in registration was club member Nico Perrino. This is the fifth year the Political Science Club has sponsored a fall voter registration drive at Thomas More College.

CITY OF BELLEVUE

Students from Thomas More College visited Bellevue, Ky., and spoke with Assistant City Manager Jody Robinson about community development and administrative issues related to her position. Robinson is also the city's Main Street Manager, and students walked the historic central business district while learning the public sector's perspective involved in business development. The students that participated were Nicholas Lambrinides, Quentin Campbell and Paul Kleier from Dr. J.T. Spence's Introduction to Public Administration class (POS 215). In addition to learning about Robinson's job functions, students talked with her about her background and training, the politics of administration and the importance of public debate in democratic decision-making. The class will be making other field trips this semester as part of a focus on introducing students to the field of public administration.

to the Titanic and the Lusitania, and the most delicious homemade ice cream. Out of Tralee, the Dingle Peninsula took our breath away as we stood on the rolling fields of green overlooking Inch Beach and its endlessly clear blue waves. We eventually ended our journey in Galway, where we spent the remaining days of our trip wandering the streets during the Galway Arts Festival, taking in the sea-salt air, and visited the island of Inis Mór in the Aran Islands with a remarkable serenity, pride in language and culture unique to its inhabitants that nevertheless opened up to visiting outsiders in a way that made us feel welcome from the moment we docked on one of the most beautiful days of all.

Ireland will forever hold a special place in our hearts, and it was difficult to leave a place we had come to love so much. The experiences we had we will take with us for the rest of our lives, and we hope to make a return trip very soon to our "home away from home."

The Presidents' Challenge

SUBMITTED BY DIRECTOR OF ANNUAL GIVING
BETH MALEY

This fall, alumni volunteers answered the call to action by signing letters to their fellow classmates urging much needed participation in the Fall drive for The Fund for Thomas More College. Specifically called to action were past presidents of the student body. Just like these students, our new president, David Armstrong, served as student body president at his alma mater, Mercyhurst University. Dave met many of these volunteers at a small reception on campus. The volunteers also had the opportunity to meet and visit with current and immediate past SGA presidents Skeeter Oloo and Nico Perrino, respectively, both seniors at Thomas More College. Dave has met many alumni and friends of Thomas More and notes that through the stories they share, a consistent theme emerges: Thomas More College Transforms Lives. Not only has Thomas More transformed their lives, but they are going out and transforming the world. One past student body president was so transformed by her visit to campus, she wrote the following personal note to include in the letter to her former classmates...

"Wow! I had not been back on the Thomas More Campus in a few years and the changes were too numerous to count. The most noticeable change was the new Mary, Seat of Wisdom Chapel sitting directly in the middle of the campus... beautiful! The student center is now located on the top floor of the main campus building and has expanded greatly. Another change I noted was the use of technology in all of the classrooms. It was really great to see that OUR Thomas More College has advanced with the times. I felt nostalgic and even a little envious as many students walked by. I couldn't help but feel connected to the spirit of TMC.

"These wonderful changes to the campus and this lifelong connection are the reasons I am writing to you today. I am writing to urge your support in the Thomas More College annual campaign, so the spirit of TMC can continue for years to come. It is important to understand that even the smallest donation has a huge impact for the students at TMC, as it did when we were students..." Logan (Walters) Minning '01, Student Government President '00 and '01.

Your gift to The Fund for Thomas More College transforms the lives of today's students. Tuition only covers about 80 percent of the cost to provide a quality education. Your gifts help to make up the remaining 20 percent. Join your fellow classmates and transform a life today at THOMASMORE.EDU/GIVING. In appreciation of alumni support for the 2012-2013 academic year, a giving honor roll listed by society and by class year is included in this issue of Moreover (follows page 14).

Alumni Profile

At some point, every child wants to be a hero. Perhaps the innate desire to save the world is something everyone is born with but most of us lose as the mortal demands of being an adult become a stronger force. The capes simply end up getting stashed away with the worn-out toys of childhood and long-forgotten dreams of yesterday. It's hard to imagine anyone really being a hero in this day and age anyway. Unless, unless ... you consider someone who powers his ambition with a desire to protect the innocent, to discover a cure, to enhance public health around the world, to make a difference. Trade the red cape for a white lab coat and a resume that's more impressive than leaping tall buildings in a single bound, and you might have just found your hero ...

Andrew M. Hebbeler, Ph.D.

Senior Policy Advisor, National Security and International Affairs, The White House Office of Science and Technology Policy

BY STACY SMITH ROGERS

Meet TMC alumnus Andrew M. Hebbeler, Ph.D. Andrew graduated from Thomas More College in 1999 with degrees in biology and philosophy. He credits the skills and experience he gained at TMC for setting the trajectory for his career, which has involved traveling all across the globe in an effort to keep the United States safe from the potential of biological threats, chemical weapons and mutating viruses, just to name a few (a.k.a., “saving the world” in superhero terms). Currently, he’s “on loan” to The White House and serves as senior policy advisor in the National Security and International Affairs division of The White House Office of Science and Technology Policy, reporting directly to the President’s Assistant for Science and Technology, Dr. John P. Holdren. Andrew’s work in Washington, D.C., supports many important decisions regarding the development of policies that affect national security on a daily basis. Armed with an intense desire to put his passion for science to good use, this TMC graduate is using the skills he developed in a small corner of northern Kentucky to impact lives around the world.

Prior to his position at The White House, Andrew managed and oversaw the U.S. State Department’s Biosecurity Engagement Program (BEP), which is an important component of the broader U.S. Cooperative Threat Reduction effort. The BEP works to reduce the threat of bioterrorism by preventing terrorist access to potentially dangerous biological materials, dual-use infrastructure and expertise. It also supports efforts to combat infectious diseases and enhance public and animal health worldwide. Andrew worked with governments in other countries on issues related to biosecurity and infectious diseases.

Andrew described his current role within the

Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP), “It’s a dynamic and exciting job, and each day is different. My primary responsibility is to provide OSTP leadership, including Dr. Holdren, with information that allows him to give the President a comprehensive view in making decisions that are related to science and technology issues.” He regularly serves in an advisory role on decisions pertaining to biological and chemical weapons, including issues related to the conflict in Syria late this summer. He also served on a team that examined the potential biological threat of the recent Middle East respiratory syndrome (MERS) coronavirus in Saudi Arabia. He explained how his responsibilities at The White House are different than those at the State Department, “Before, I oversaw the implementation of a program. Now, I have a more central role in policy. Here, it’s more about how science and technology are being considered in the development of national security policies in the national security phase.”

Andrew reflected on his experience as an undergrad, “Thomas More College framed my world view. It set the trajectory for my life. Many people in my field went to college to get degrees in molecular biology, but I wanted a broader perspective. My experience at TMC has helped me in my current role today, and I use the skills I learned there every day in my work at The White House,” he said. “Thomas More was exactly what I was looking for because it offered a well-rounded liberal arts education. I declared majors in biology and philosophy because I wanted to go into the bioethics field, but I really fell in love with biology, specifically immunology,” he said. Another thing TMC gave Andrew was the advantage of the faculty/student interaction. “I wasn’t sure what to do with that passion, but my discussions with the faculty, especially

Dr. Barone, helped me to figure out the right path. I remember speaking one-on-one with many professors, including Drs. Lorentz, Bryant, Ferner and Hageman, as well as Drs. Twaddell and Cronin.”

Like many people who earn a liberal arts education, Andrew said the other skills he learned outside of science gave him an edge as his career progressed. “I applied some of those skills later through my role with the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) and the National Postdoctoral Association (NPA).” Andrew served as 2009–2010 AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellow. (AAAS is the world’s largest general scientific society and publisher of the journal, Science.) He was also elected to the board of the NPA, supporting national efforts to enhance the postdoctoral experience, including extending retirement benefits to post docs, among other issues.

As a student, Andrew’s enthusiasm for scientific research was coupled with a desire to explore international public health issues. After graduating from Thomas More College, Andrew completed his doctoral work in the laboratory of C. David Pauza at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, where he focused on understanding an unconventional lymphocyte population that is important during immune responses to infectious disease and cancer. There, he was awarded a fully-funded, two-year training grant from the National Institutes of Health and National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases. After earning his Ph.D. in Molecular Microbiology and Immunology, he completed a short postdoctoral fellowship at the Institute of Human Virology (IHV), which was founded and directed by Dr. Robert Gallo, the eminent scientist who became world famous in 1984 when he co-discovered HIV as the cause of AIDS. Andrew said that experience was critical to his career and development. “I wasn’t just gaining knowledge in a science vacuum. More importantly for me, I was working in the real world, helping treat real patients,” he explained.

After earning his Ph.D., Andrew was faced with more decisions. “When you get a Ph.D. in this field, you’re normally set for an academic track and looking at spending the rest of your career overseeing research. I wasn’t sure if that was the path I wanted to go,” he said. Andrew still wanted to explore international public health issues, so he applied for postdoctoral work and was awarded a competitive, three-year, fully-funded A.P. Giannini Medical Research Foundation Fellowship at the Gladstone Institute of Virology and Immunology, located on the University of California San Francisco campus. There, he performed basic research to help find new ways to purge HIV from infected individuals.

While Andrew enjoyed his years at the research bench, he continued to search for positions that provided the right mix of opportunities which would permit him to study more global issues related to infectious diseases and public health issues. In early 2008, he learned of a highly competitive program designed to provide accomplished U.S. scientists and engineers with the opportunity to participate in and contribute to the federal policy-making process, while learning firsthand about the intersection of science and policy. He said that when he read the requirements for the AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellowship, it was as if it were written specifically for him. "I had gained exactly the type of experiences that someone would need to be successful for this fellowship. This opportunity offered me a whole world outside of the laboratory, but it was also anchored in the things I loved studying the most – science, infectious diseases and public health."

“Thomas More College framed my world view. It set the trajectory for my life. Many people in my field went to college to get degrees in molecular biology, but I wanted a broader perspective. My experience at TMC has helped me in my current role today, and I use the skills I learned there every day in my work at The White House.”

TMC Chair and Professor of Biology Dr. Siobhan Barone shared her experience as Andrew’s professor ...

“Although I try not to have ‘favorite students,’ Andrew Hebbeler is one of those students that you simply can’t forget. I taught him several courses, but it was the immunology course he took with me that I remember best. As an immunologist myself, I am always excited when I see one of my students acquire a love for the field, and Andrew was one such student. He was not only bright but also so enthusiastic that it was simply fun to talk with him and see where the conversation would lead. I have followed his career path with interest (and just a little bit of pride), and by all accounts it is clear that he chose the right profession. As much as I enjoyed Andrew as a student, I am even more delighted today to have him as a friend and colleague.”

Andrew spent the first two years at the State Department as an AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellow. The timing of this position was fortuitous because President Barack Obama had recently been inaugurated and his Administration was rolling out national policy directives focused on countering biological threats, whether natural outbreaks (like MERS or influenza) or acts of bioterrorism. Andrew said the fellowship at the State Department enabled him to see his public health work through the security lens. "It allowed me to do the kinds of things I wanted to do concerning public health and see how that applied to international security," he explained.

ANDREW'S CAREER PATH

1999 – Graduated from Thomas More College (biology and philosophy double major)

2000-06 – Graduate Student, University of Maryland, Baltimore

2006-07 – Postdoctoral Fellow, Institute of Human Virology

2007-09 – Postdoctoral Fellow, Gladstone Institute of Virology and Immunology, University of California San Francisco

2009-II – AAAS Science & Technology Policy Fellow, U.S. Department of State Program Officer with the Biosecurity Engagement Program (BEP) in the Office of Cooperative Threat Reduction at the U.S. Department of State

2011-13 – BEP Team Chief, Biosecurity Engagement Program, U.S. Department of State

June 2013 - Present – Senior Policy Advisor, National Security and International Affairs, The White House Office of Science and Technology Policy

Among other places, Andrew traveled to Central and Southeast Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa. "I met with officials from Ministries of Health, Agriculture and Foreign Affairs as we worked together to identify areas that would strengthen biosecurity. I would visit national laboratories responsible for diagnosing and reporting infectious diseases in these countries. Our goal was to strengthen global security across the world," he explained. He went to a variety of laboratories discovering different ways to partner with other countries to achieve common goals.

"For me, it was an amazing experience. I was finally in a position not just focused on basic science, but also broader issues related to international public health and security," he added.

At the end of the fellowship, Andrew was promoted to overseeing the entire global program (Biosecurity Engagement Program – BEP). For a short period, he served as the acting deputy director for his office, during which he gained experience in chemical and nuclear security as well, adding to his well-rounded skill set and broadening his ability to make a difference in the world. Andrew's current position at The White House allows him to play a key role in predicting and addressing threats to national and public health security and helping improve the quality of life in the United States and beyond. He's been able to utilize all the skills he has gained since graduating from Thomas More College, where his career path began on a solid foundation of examining the world and determining how he could contribute.

Like any true hero, humility overshadows boastful bragging when it comes to talking about his "super powers," so chances are likely that if you met him for coffee, Andrew would remain low key about the important people he has met during his career and the steady, upward climb his resume has traveled. He said that during a recent phone call to his mother, who still lives in his hometown of Park Hills, Ky., he told her that what keeps his feet on the ground is the right mix of humility, confidence and anxiety, with just enough anxiety to feel like he's failing. For those of us who still remember those childhood dreams of wanting to "save the world," we can look to Andrew and realize that heroes don't have to be faster than a speeding bullet or more powerful than a locomotive. They can simply follow their dreams, keep learning, use the skills they've honed and find their place in this world where they can make a difference.

Faculty Notes

KUDOS TO TMC FACULTY ON THEIR ACCOLADES, PRESENTATIONS & PUBLISHED WORKS

Ms. Catherine (Kate) Arnold, assistant professor, criminal justice and sociology department, took two undergraduate students, Christopher (Mac) Stevens and Amber Cox, to present their research at the Southern Criminal Justice Association conference in Virginia Beach, Va., in September. Both students had a good experience and gained valuable feedback.

Stevens' presentation was entitled "The American Dream and the Effect on Criminogenic Choices." He examined the effect that Institutional Anomie Theory and the American Dream have on White Collar Crime. Cox presented "Guilty Before the Verdict?" She examined the effects of judicial discretion on racial disparity at the court level.

Dr. Shiv Desai, assistant professor, education, is on the executive board of the Hispanic Scholarship Fund. Dr. Desai presented at two conferences this fall including "Uncovering Hidden Literacies: What the Common Core Doesn't Tell" at the Kentucky Association of Teacher Educators with Dr. Barbara Zahler, associate professor, education; and "Voices of Freedom: Spoken Word, Hip Hop, Community Activism, and Youth Empowerment" at Free Minds Free People Conference 2013.

Dr. Erwin F. Erhardt III, professor, history and economics, presented a paper entitled "A Forgotten Child Actor: Freddie Bartholomew" at the International Association of Media and Historians (IAMHIST): Childhood and the Media at the University of Leicester, UK, July 17-20. He then travelled to Warsaw, Poland, to present the paper "A 'New World' Pope: the Election of Francis I to the Papacy of the Roman Catholic Church" at the International Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association Conference from July 22-24. In October, Dr. Erhardt attended the European Studies Conference at the University of Nebraska—Omaha where he presented "The Economic and Social Consequences of Austerity on the Population of Greece." He also attended the concurrent Global Studies Conference in Omaha and presented a paper entitled "Bangladesh: Reforms and Reckoning after the Factory Collapse." From Oct. 30 - Nov. 1, Dr. Erhardt, who is also a pre-law advisor at Thomas More College, attended the Southern Association of Pre-Law Advisors Conference in Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. R. Steven Flynn, professor and chair, accountancy, published his article "Auditors' Noneconomic Bonds to a Nonprofit Client: Impairments to the Air of Independence?" in the Journal of Academy of Business and Economics, Vol. 12 (4), 2012.

A Message from the Director of Annual Giving - Beth Maley

Thank you for your gifts. Your generosity is the reason Thomas More College is the excellent source of faith-based higher-education in the Northern Kentucky, Greater Cincinnati area, that it is. Your commitment, along with the commitment of the faculty and staff, make this College an experience which touches and transforms the lives of the students who attend. We are each called to share our time, talent and treasure to make this world a better place and TMC truly appreciates that you have shared your treasure with us.

Bless you now and as you continue to give!

Ms. Lynnette A. Guzzino, Esq., associate professor, business administration, represented Thomas More College as professor of international business, teaching a class through the Cooperative Center for Study Abroad, (CCSA) 2013 summer program at King's College, London, England. Business site visits included Unilever Global Headquarters, Bloomberg Business, Bank of England, London Metal Exchange, Mini Cooper car plant, Penningtons law firm, Nielsen and the U.S. Commerce Department. Cultural visits included Stonehenge, Salisbury, Windsor Castle, Oxford, Cambridge, Highclere Castle (Downton Abbey), Dover, Canterbury, and Edinburgh, Scotland.

Dr. Joyce J. Hamberg, associate professor, education, participated in her first Susan G. Komen 5K Walk for the Cure with husband, Jim, and friend Michelle Infante on Sept. 14. More than 23,000 people participated in the walk which began and ended at Great American Ball Park where Dr. Hamberg participated in the survivor ceremony. Dr. Hamberg has been cancer free for 2.5 years and found it extremely encouraging to be with so many others who had walked the walk.

Dr. Hamberg and Dr. Christy Petroze, associate professor, education, opened the 2013-14 Brown Bag Lunch series for colleagues at TMC with a presentation on "The Seven Strategies of Assessment for Learning," using information received at a conference in Charlotte, N.C., where Jan Chapuis, the author of Seven Strategies of Assessment for Learning shared strategies currently being emulated in their courses. Dr. Hamberg also attended the fall conference of the Kentucky Association of Teacher Educators held at the METS Center in Erlanger, Ky., and presented the Post-Secondary Professional Development Award to recent MAT graduate Katey Blood during a special luncheon ceremony.

Dr. Kimberly Haverkos, assistant professor, education, spent the summer involved with STEM education best practices and professional development for teachers. Dr. Haverkos gave three presentations for secondary content teachers at the Thomas More STEM Initiative at the Biology Field Station, two of which were co-presented with Dr. Christy Petroze. The three presentations included: "Engaging the Standards: From Deconstruction to Assessment"; "Best Practices in Assessment"; and "Evolving Narratives: The Role of Literacy in STEM Education." Dr. Haverkos presented "Changing the Classroom Conversation: How the Non-Rational Affects Girls and their Relationships with STEM" at the Girl Meets STEM Think Tank and Conference in July held at Harpeth Hall in Nashville. In

Dr. Oestreicher will teach the course "Opening the Door for Change and Process Improvement in Europe," (Winter 2013-14) in London for the Cooperative Center for Study Abroad (CCSA).

Dr. Christy Petroze, assistant professor, education, spent the summer involved with professional development for teachers throughout the Northern Kentucky region. She and Dr. Kim Haverkos gave two presentations for secondary content teachers at the TMC STEM Initiative in June. Dr. Petroze spent a week leading a content literacy workshop at NKU as part of the Improving Educator Quality grant. Her final workshop, Content Area Writing That Makes Sense, served the Bracken County High School teachers. She is looking forward to collaborating with local schools and teachers on the implementation of the content literacy standards throughout the school year.

Dr. Malcolm Robinson, professor and chairperson, economics, made an appearance in August on the KET show Kentucky Tonight, discussing jobs and the economy.

Dr. Jack Rudnick Jr., associate professor, business administration and health care management, co-authored an article, "Elder Abuse and Neglect: A Survey of Clergy Awareness, Knowledge, and Intervention Preferences" (Volume 25, Issue 4, 2013) with Pamela B. Teaster, Ph.D., Director of the Institute for Gerontology at the University of Kentucky. He also participated in the United Nation's internationally sponsored World Elder Abuse Day, 2013 via an interview on EWTN Radio's Son Rise Morning Show and published an article in The Catholic Telegraph, Diocese of Cincinnati, entitled "Elder Abuse and Neglect: What Faith Communities Should Know." Dr. Rudnick also volunteered to assist the Board of Directors of BeConcerned with a strategic planning retreat and process.

Dr. Manish Sharma, professor and chair, education, presented at the International Society of Technology in Education annual conference in San Antonio in June 2013 at a bring-your-own-device session/presentation "Creating a Technology Workflow Using Tablets for P-20 Educators." Faculty Profile

LISA SPANGLER-TOROK, Ph.D., RN

Professor and Chair of Nursing

Q: What do you want students to take away from your class?

A: I want the students to understand how much nurses impact the lives of their patients and their patients' families.

Q: How long have you worked at TMC?

A: This is the start of my 22nd year at Thomas More College.

Q: Where did you obtain your degrees?

A: I obtained my Bachelor's degree from Mount St. Joseph. I received my Master's and Ph.D. from the University of Cincinnati.

Q: What is something that you've always wanted to do but haven't had the chance to do yet?

A: I would love to travel to Australia.

Q: Where was your last vacation and why did you choose that destination?

A: Our last family vacation was in Florida, June 2013. We traveled to Fort Lauderdale so our daughter Maria could compete in Nationals for tumbling and trampoline. We then went to Orlando to celebrate my husband's safe return from Afghanistan.

Q: What is something about you that people would be surprised to know?

A: I'm pretty much an open book, even with students, so I don't think I have many surprises. I am a huge VanHalen fan but that's not much of a surprise since I grew up in the '80s.

Q: Who has been (or is) your role model and why?

A: My role model is my Mom, Charlotte. She moved to Cincinnati from Tollesboro, Ky., and knew no one. She worked full time and went to school at night. She devotes herself completely to my family, which is the only way I was able to handle my husband's three deployments overseas.

Q: What song or artist do you listen to when you need to get motivated?

A: The sound track from "Wicked" always boosts my mood and energy.

Q: What are your hobbies – or what do you do when you're not teaching at TMC?

A: I like walking, scrap booking and spending time with my family.

Q: What has teaching at TMC taught you?

A: I have learned that I love teaching almost as much as I love nursing. I love being a nurse and having that personal involvement in patients' lives. The fact that I can share that love with others and educate them to be nurses is the best of both worlds.

Q: What book is on your night stand? Or do you have a favorite book?

A: The "Last Lecture" is on my night stand but my favorite is by Dr. Seuss, "Oh, the Places You'll Go!"

Q: As a child, what did you want to be when you "grew up"?

A: As a young child I always wanted to be a teacher. It was not until high school that I decided to be a nurse.

Q: Has there been a particular challenge in your life that you've learned from that you would like to share with others?

A: My daughter Hannah was diagnosed with Juvenile Diabetes when she was six years old. There is a lot to learn and manage and many people said to me, "I could never do that." I always replied, "Yes, you could; you would not have a choice." Although it was not a choice and it can be overwhelming, it has taught me I am stronger than I think and can handle anything.

President's Profile

President Armstrong processes to the CCC followed by Reverend Monsignor Michael Due, Reverend Ian Patrick McDole, Bishop Roger Foys and the Very Reverend Daniel Schomaker.

Step Into the Future With David A. Armstrong, J.D.

He tweets, paints anything that doesn't move blue and has created a sense of urgency on campus to push the boundaries and make TMC grow like never before!

Kim Harp, Director of Communications and PR, sat down with President David Armstrong to ask a few questions about his inauguration, his confidence in our institution, his family and his faith.

Q. This is the first time you've been inaugurated as a college president. How did it feel?

Being inaugurated as a president is quite an experience. It's extraordinary. It was certainly an impressive affair, with all the pomp and circumstance involved. What was humbling for me to see, and so special to my heart, was the work put in by our inauguration committee and the entire campus community in making it such a wonderful day – it was astounding.

Inauguration day, as well as the entire weekend, had a significant impact on me. It showed my family and special guests what Leslie and I learned during the interviewing process: TMC and this region are the most hospitable, warm, welcoming and friendly people that you'd ever want to meet. The day of the inauguration when I drove up to campus, the song "Home" by Phillip Phillips was playing on the radio, which was very providential. "Just know you're not alone, cause I'm gonna make this place your home." After a weekend like that, you truly feel at home. I can't thank everyone enough for making my family feel at home, from the Bishop, to the Inauguration Steering Committee, faculty, staff, students and Board of Trustees.

Q. In your inauguration speech, you talked about your vision for TMC, which included increasing enrollment. Will students still have small classes, individual attention and the personal touch?

Absolutely. It is what we are about; it is what we do. The fact that we desire to grow will not change who we are. We will not let growth change who we are. Along with the increase in enrollment numbers comes an increase in staff and faculty; therefore, classroom ratios will remain the same and the level of service will remain the same. The point of growth is to make the institution better as a whole, not lose any of the benefits that we possess currently.

Q. It is obvious that you deeply believe in this institution and what it offers. What aspects of Thomas More College would make you want to send your children here?

With my son in tenth grade and my daughter in eighth grade, I have a little bit more time to have those types of conversations with them. But here's my answer. I'd want my children to attend a college that genuinely cares about its students and is mission centric. Isn't that what parents should do, invest in this type of education? A Catholic education is synonymous with a quality education, and I want that for my children. If they choose TMC, I will be happy because I know they will have a close personal relationship with faculty who will bond with them and guide them through the education process. I know that the faculty and staff will take a personal interest in their success.

Thomas More College is on the cusp of a new era. It is a special and exciting time in TMC history with a new president and new programs. I would love for my children to reap the benefits of the positive changes that are occurring now.

Q. Behind this great institution is a strong group of faculty and staff. You encouraged the staff to read a few books on change and customer service. What is a major concept you'd like them to adopt?

I'll mention three books that I had the faculty and staff read. First, Culture Shift. This book detailed the skill sets needed to be successful in a world that is changing more rapidly every day. Second, WAYMISH which stands for "Why Are You Making It So Hard (for me to give you my money)" which is not a customer service book, but a success book. The premise is that we must make our priority those we serve. Those we serve are the people who matter most. Lastly, Organizing Genius by Warren Bennis, a great leadership expert, discusses how hard work, discipline and a positive attitude go a long way toward creating great organizations. I was greatly impacted by these books, and I wanted to multiply the impact by sharing them with my colleagues. What's been so impressive for me is how the people here at TMC have embraced these concepts. It is evident in our daily interactions with students. I'll also mention our improved curb appeal as one of the results seen from the implementation of these concepts. A college campus must be welcoming and must make people want to come inside. If they can't get past our outside, they won't want to come inside. I am impressed that the staff saw the value of this concept and made necessary improvements. We needed to differentiate ourselves from buildings in the nearby business park.

Q. Added to the campus last year was the Mary, Seat of Wisdom Chapel, which reflects TMC's values and mission. You also reflect those values with your personal faith. What moments in your life define your faith journey?

Although I am not perfect, I am so fortunate to have grown up in a faith-centered home. The learning of faith comes from your family first, and I strive to create that foundation for my children as it was done for me. Many enduring lessons about commitment and sacrifice came from my parents. Specifically, their sacrifice so that we could have a faith-based education. My life has been enriched by observing people – from clergy, to religious orders, to mentors, to friends – live lives of service and faith.

In 2010, I was asked to get involved with a men's fellowship group at my old parish. I attended the Christ Renews His Parish retreat, and I undoubtedly experienced a rekindling of my spiritual formation. I will be forever grateful to the men and priests who served us on that weekend. One of the central messages I came away with was that God entrusted me to the role of a father and I must make that my primary responsibility. When you have a chance to ponder why you were put on this earth, it is powerful. It was most certainly a positive experience that has impacted the way I live.

ABOUT DAVE ARMSTRONG

David A. Armstrong, J.D., became the 14th president of Thomas More College on July 1, 2013. He came to the position after serving as vice president and general counsel of Notre Dame College in South Euclid, Ohio, for 10 years where he oversaw seven major divisions. His background in higher education administration at this institution as well as at Mercyhurst University in Erie, Pa., and Thiel College in Greenville, Pa., includes a span of experience in development, student life and recruitment, higher education law and policy, and athletics.

Born and raised in Cleveland, Ohio, Armstrong holds a Juris Doctor from Cleveland-Marshall College of Law and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science with a minor in Accounting from Mercyhurst University. Armstrong's lifelong passion for Catholic education stems from his own experience growing up in Catholic schools. As one of seven children, he attended parochial grade school and high school (St. Peter Chanel, where he is a member of the Distinguished Alumni Hall of Fame), and was one of the four siblings who earned a Catholic college education. He shares a passion for athletics, having experienced the role of student athlete (Mercyhurst University, where he is a member of the Football Hall of Fame and a charter member of the Athletic Hall of Fame) and college football coach and athletic director (Thiel College).

Armstrong is a frequent speaker on higher education, specifically on future trends of higher education law and Title IX issues.

"I am thrilled to begin my tenure at Thomas More College. This is a great institution, highly regarded for providing a values-based liberal arts education in the Catholic tradition. I look forward to sharing my experience, ability and enthusiasm to continue the traditions that have made Thomas More such a special place." - Dave Armstrong

The "Dave Project," a Year of Firsts

This video project began as an exercise in documenting how the new president fairs in his first year and, since this is an institution of higher education, who better to document those events than students? Seniors Nico Perrino (political science) and Jill Ruhe (communications) stepped up to the plate by brainstorming and executing the idea in the form of interviewing and following Dave as he experiences TMC events. Laura Barfield (communications) and Tim Gormly (marketing) have joined the ranks of "Dave's Team" as the project expands in scope. See what Dave has been up to at THOMASMORE.EDU/DAVEPROJECT.

Bensman Golf Classic

Monday, Sept. 16, was a great day to play golf as 27 foursomes took the course at Summit Hills Country Club in search of first place honors. There was a surprise on the 10th hole as President Dave Armstrong met each foursome and assisted as the fifth putter, then treated golfers to a “Dave Armstrong” signature beverage.

Psychology Alumni Reunion: Renewing Connections

On a Friday evening in April 2012, two vans filled with TMC students and faculty pulled into a hotel in Evansville, Ind., ready to participate in a Psychology Research Conference at the University of Southern Indiana. A neatly dressed gentleman greeted students as they unloaded, and he then headed towards the faculty. The gentleman was alumnus Gene Schadler '89, a therapist in private practice in Evansville. He was at the conference to visit with faculty friends and continue his lobbying efforts for a Psychology Alumni Reunion. Fast forward to August 10, 2013, a lovely Saturday afternoon on the TMC campus, where a Mass in the Mary, Seat of Wisdom chapel was followed by a well-attended and enjoyed-by-all reception in Steigerwald Hall for alums of the Psychology Department. Special thanks to Schadler for starting the drive that made this reunion happen. Additional photos are online at FACEBOOK.COM/THOMASMOREALUMNI.

Sister Mary Laurence Budde, SND, '53

A legacy of commitment, service and diligent quest for excellence

BY STACY SMITH ROGERS

News of Sister Mary Laurence Budde's death on July 30, 2013, triggered collective sighs throughout the Thomas More College community. Many remembered the impact she had on thousands of students, staff and faculty whose lives she touched during the 40-plus years she taught at TMC. Sr. Mary Laurence's influence has been described as "life-changing" by many who fell under her tutelage. It's unlikely there is a student who took her class who doesn't remember her or credit her for helping him/her succeed in life in some way or another. Sr. Mary Laurence stood over six feet tall and normally dressed in full habit when she taught, so her stature alone commanded respect, but most likely it was her steadfast pursuit of pushing students to go above and beyond that prompted them to sit a little straighter in their seats and challenge themselves to dig deeper into their studies. It was obvious to everyone that she held high standards in her classroom and that she expected her students to share her passion for working diligently toward excellence. More importantly, however, she was a living example of commitment to one's calling, sacrifice and service.

Among her many accolades, Sr. Mary Laurence is credited for helping found the Thomas More College Biology Field Station, a facility that today impacts the lives of not only TMC students but also students of all ages throughout the region. Originally, Sr. Mary Laurence was certified to teach math, but the College needed a biology professor. When asked to pursue a Ph.D. in biology, she simply responded to the need of the College and embarked on the ambitious task of earning her degree at Catholic University of America. Her willingness to do what was called for and step outside her comfort zone is an example of the commitment to service and sacrifice that Sr. Mary Laurence embodied. Although originally born out of necessity, her love of biology evolved into another true calling. She continued to respond to the needs of Thomas More College as her teaching career flourished, accepting the request to serve as interim dean not once, but twice.

Her connections to students and alumni are something for which Sr. Mary Laurence will always be remembered. Many say that it was not unusual for her to remember specific details about her students even long after they graduated. "She had an uncanny talent for knowing the precise year and graduation class students had been in long after they graduated. I believe that one of her biggest joys was her connections to Thomas More alumni and the lifelong relationships she fostered," TMC Biology Professor and Director of the Biology Field Station Dr. Christopher Lorentz said.

Not only did she serve as an example for her students, but Sr. Mary Laurence served as an example for her colleagues as well. "She was very committed to the Biology Department, but the overall needs of the College came first. She demonstrated that individual

ABOUT SR. MARY LAURENCE

Born May 17, 1929 in Covington, Ky., Sr. Mary Laurence Budde was the third of seven children born to Lawrence and Anna Budde. She attended St. Thomas Elementary School and Notre Dame Academy, where she became acquainted with the Sisters of Notre Dame and entered the convent in her senior year. She professed her vows Aug. 10, 1949. After earning her initial degrees (B.A. math VMC 1953, M.S. botany and zoology Catholic University of America 1955), she achieved a Ph.D. in biology from Catholic University of America in 1958. Sr. Mary Laurence was the recipient of several National Science Foundation grants and numerous awards including the A.D. Albright Award and the Sears-Roebuck "Teaching Excellence and Campus Leadership Award." She retired in 1997 and was named professor emerita in biology that same year. In October 2011, the College dedicated the Sister Mary Laurence Budde, SND, Outdoor Classroom and Nature Trail; honoring her for years of work and vision in helping to bring to fruition a field station that is a one-of-a-kind center for applied biological research. She was actively involved in her religious community and served in various leadership positions. Sr. Mary Laurence died July 30, 2013, at the age of 84.

gains are secondary to the institution. Her sense of community as a nun translated to her role here at TMC. She was very respectful of her peers," Lorentz added. He noted that while her humility often downplayed her significant accomplishments, her influence had long-lasting effects. "Her life was a call to service from the beginning. There's no doubt that we wouldn't have the Field Station today if it hadn't been for her influence." Lorentz explained that she often dedicated herself to causes well outside her interest, setting aside any personal goals of her own. "At the time, acquiring and establishing the Field Station was not a popular choice, but she helped convince the College to go that route, knowing that the investment would eventually pay off, and of course, it did."

MOREOVER

There is no doubt that Sr. Mary Laurence influenced many at TMC. Her intolerance for mediocrity ignited a passion among her students to achieve well beyond their personal expectations, inspiring many of them to pursue dreams they never thought were possible. The following are just a handful of her former students' remembrances.

Dr. Daniel Rutterer '73 – "I probably would not have been a physician if it were not for Sr. Mary Laurence. She and Dr. Humphreys, Mr. Volker and Dr. Bryant were the pillars of a wonderful biology department at TMC. She was very tough but also very fair. Her tests were legendary and took all shapes, from fill-in-the-blank and matching (not as easy as they sound) to probing essay tests. However, it was after I graduated that I really got to know Sr. Mary Laurence on a much more personal level, and I realized she had been keeping in touch with many of her past students. She could tell you stories about each of them, and I realized how much they meant to her. On a personal note, I really feel that the letters of recommendation written by Sister were a major reason I was accepted into medical school at the University of Louisville. My situation was a little unique, and I believe that her insight into me as a person definitely influenced the admissions physician who interviewed me. She was a wonderful person, and to her credit, many of the physicians in the area also owe many thanks to her."

Dr. Mary Ann Barnes '77 – "Sr. Mary Laurence was brilliant, teaching us everything about biology from the most inner workings of the cells to how organisms live and work together. She knew each student and helped to mold them into the best they could be, academically, socially and spiritually. Her famously direct quips were so honest, but gentle, that she could get by with addressing the thorniest of issues with a smile."

Gilbert R. Hageman, Ph.D. '68 – "Sr. Mary Laurence Budde was the single most important teacher and mentor in my 20 years of formal education. Her life-principles were examples for all of her students. She was demanding in the classroom and fair with her students. Since my graduation more than 40 years ago, I have regularly corresponded with her and occasionally enjoyed lunch with her and my classmate, Ed Schneider. Naming the outdoor classroom at the Biology Field Station was a well-deserved honor for her. I shall miss her immensely."

Dr. Sharon Schroeder Wynn '89 – "Sister was one of the toughest and most thorough teachers I ever had, and this includes my medical school career. She was also one of my favorite teachers, and she definitely had a heart of gold. When I entered her biology class, I was a transfer from the nursing program at Thomas More. I wasn't really sure that I could hack it in biology classes. She definitely didn't accept any slacking. However, she did go out of her way to check on me and see if I was keeping up. I hope she is enjoying herself in Heaven."

Bob Beck '73 – "When I enrolled at TMC I intended to become a dentist, but after that initial summer at the Biology Field Station working with Sr. Mary Laurence, I completely changed career paths. I decided to get into environmental/energy policy. And the rest is history, as they say. I spent over 40 years at it, 31 of which were in the center ring in Washington, D.C. So you can see how dramatic an influence she had on me and my life. She definitely loved biology and, even more, she loved teaching it to her students. She was a huge sports fan, and she had the patience to see the long-term and big picture in all things."

Dr. John Greifenkamp '64 – "I started at Villa Madonna College in 1959, lacking preparation for college and feeling lost in a big city. Sr. Mary Laurence was appointed my mentor (I suspect because she had committed some terrible sin and needed major penance). I had a minus average at the end of the first year and a C- at the end of the second year. It did not make it any easier that I disagreed with everything Sr. Laurence advised me to do. Yet, she continued to hang in with a stubborn, struggling kid. In my third year, she asked, as a favor to her, would I report on a book called Phenomenon of Man by Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. I reported it to a class of students and it went over like a bullet through fog. She then asked me to give it to another class, and I reluctantly agreed. I showed up and it was all professors. It was an intense, challenging exchange that changed me. She had given me a huge shove, and I knew anything was possible after that. I knew it. She knew it. We both knew it then. I had changed. I went on to do post-graduate work in biophysics and molecular immunology. I graduated from medical school in 1971 and have practiced medicine for 40-plus years. I still wonder what her sin was that she had to do the penance with me, but I'm sure that whatever it was she more than paid for it."

10-Minute Spiritual Break...

with TMC alumnus
Deacon Bill Theis '72,
St. Therese Church, Southgate, Ky.

We walk the long hallway of the jail where we minister, and we pass the solitary confinement rooms where there are flaps over the windows so the inmates cannot see out. They only have the blank walls at which to stare. I think how horrible this must be. I am told that inmates on death row fear solitary confinement more than death. Our human nature yearns for acceptance. Further down, an inmate keeps kicking the cell door; I say a little prayer.

This week we are going to the women's dormitory where there are 40 – 50 women in the same room. The women, mostly young, are happy to see someone in regular street clothes. Six inmates join us for our prayer service. We are going over the Gospel of the Prodigal Son, where one son asks for his inheritance and leaves his father's house. He squanders his inheritance on wild living. He takes a job feeding pigs but yearns to return to his father. He decides to go back and ask his father if he can be one of his hired hands as he no longer deserves to be his son. The father sees him coming and goes out to meet him. The father welcomes him back with open arms as his son.

We tell them that the father in the story represents our Heavenly Father. He waits anxiously for sinners to return to him and will forgive any sin, no matter how great, as long as we are truly sorry. After some discussion, we move on to petitions. Most pray for their families, especially their children. What they miss most is being with their families. We finish with an "Our Father" and the women thank us for coming.

As we leave, the inmate banging on the door is quiet; maybe my prayer brought this about. Again, I think about how lonely it must be in this solitary cell. Then I think of how many people are prisoners in their own homes. How many of us have friends or relatives who live alone or in nursing homes? A visit or phone call from us would make their day. Some of us may even have friends or relatives we haven't spoken to in years because of some disagreement. We may not even remember what the disagreement was about, but we tell ourselves it was serious. Isn't it time to make amends?

Some people are afraid to visit the sick and the elderly because they do not know what to say. I visit a friend every week who can't talk and is a prisoner in his own body. When I grab his hand, he squeezes mine. Sometimes it is not necessary to say anything; they just appreciate your being there.

Where in the World is Flat Tommy?

Tommy Mo's traveling counterpart, Flat Tommy, keeps showing up in the most interesting places! Since our last issue Dr. Jim Stratman '82 and Nancy (Klayer) Stratman '76 invited Tommy to enjoy a show and have dessert with them while visiting in Las Vegas. While in Las Vegas, he also spent time with Mary Ellen (Ginney) Dorough '80 and her husband, former TMC student Mike Dorough. A road trip to San Francisco with Mike Dorough resulted in a visit with alumnus Jim Kleier '76.

South of the border, Tommy enjoyed time in Playa Del Carmen, Mexico, with alumna Tonia Griffin '01. (Awesome tan, Tommy!) Air travel was in order as Kayla Ritter '11 packed Tommy in her suitcase for a visit to Chongqing, China and a date at The People's Assembly Hall. And, BONUS, John Hodge, chairperson of TMC's Board of Trustees, took Tommy on a trip to Paris, France.

Help us add stars

TMC Alumni-Community Trip to Ireland

Interested in visiting Ireland? Thomas More College's own Dr. Ray Hebert is planning now for an alumni-community trip in summer 2015 (see page 7 for details).

Perhaps you've already been somewhere that rates as your all-time-favorite adventure? Send us an email listing WHERE and WHY by Jan. 10, 2014. We'd like to share these great destinations with fellow TMC alumni! Send to MOREOVER@THOMASMORE.EDU.
