Program requirements include 6 credit hours of language at the 200 level or higher and, as it relates to the primary focus of the major (Latin American Studies, European Studies, or Developing World Studies) the language requirements vary. In addition, there are electives that are required associated with each primary focus of the major. Students may also obtain relevant credits for their major by adding a variety of related electives to the primary focus of their concentration in International Studies. The major includes a requirement for Study Abroad experience and university requirements include experiential learning credits which may be obtained through any Study Abroad program. See the Degree Requirement Checklist for a list of potential electives.
